Family Time:

Hand out one cube to each member of the family. If there are fewer than six people, give some people two cubes, or share. Take turns rolling your cube and answering the question. Some pre-readers may need help from others in reading the cubes.

Alternate Play: After everyone has answered a question, trade cubes with another person and continue.

Alternate Play 2: After answering a question, choose someone else in the group and ask them the same question.

Guess Who?

Have everyone take three small sheets of paper and a pencil. Roll three cubes and have everyone write down their answers to the questions without showing them to anyone. Pre-readers may need assistance in doing this part. Fold the papers in half and put them in three piles, one for each question. Start with the first question and have someone read one of the answers. Everyone then tries to guess whose answer it was. Put the paper back, pick another question, and continue. Do this until all three questions and answers have been completed.
You Choose

Roll any number of dice at the same time. Look over all the questions and then choose the one you want to answer. Alternate play: Roll as many dice as you want. Then, assign a question to each person in the group by handing them the die with the question on it. Everyone answers their questions, and then the next person gets to roll and assign.

Connect And Share

Do this activity under adult supervision. If you have the ability to use technology to connect to family and friends outside your house, try this fun activity. Once you have connected to your group, announce it’s time for “Speak and Share.” Assign an order to the online group, from youngest to oldest. As the host, ask each person on their turn to pick one of the dice, and then you roll it. Read the question out loud so everyone hears it. Have the assigned person answer the question. Continue with the next person, asking them each time to pick one of the dice to roll.

Alternate Play: After answering a question, the person can choose someone else in the online group and ask them the same question.

Q&A

Children stand up, one at a time, introduce themselves, and ask, “What would you like to know about me?” Everyone takes turns rolling a cube and asking the question on top. The child at the front should answer 5 questions before another child stands up to switch with them.

Interview

Give two children all six cubes, and roll them. One child will be the “Interviewer” and ask the other child questions. Encourage them to listen to each answer, and ask more questions about what the other child says. Roll the cubes again, and have the children switch places.
Nonverbal Communication

Each child rolls a cube and answers the question without using any words. They can make faces, gestures, or move around as much as they want. See if the other children can figure out what they are trying to communicate.

Verbal To Nonverbal

Have children break up into pairs. One child will answer a question quietly to their partner, who then has to act out the answer to the rest of the group. See if the group can guess what they are trying to communicate.

Favorite Color Roll

Have each child choose their favorite color of cube, and roll it. Have them answer every question on the cube in any order they want. Then, have them explain why the color is their favorite.
