And the stars and planets glittered through the night.

The morning wind blew and blew.

The moon's light glowed bright.
The children said, “Good night. Sleep tight!”

The flag went flip flap.

The plaid clothes went slip slap.

The flowers closed up tight.
The evening stars and planets began to gleam.

The clippers went snip snap.

And the wind blew and blew.

And the clouds floated past.
The children played in the shade.

The noon clouds floated past.

The children played and played.

Slowly the light began to fade.
